

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Monday 06 Sep 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:

Becoming hotter early this week, especially England and Wales.

Today:

Scotland, Northern Ireland and northern England starting mostly cloudy with some rain or drizzle, becoming confined to western Scotland later. Else, dry with sunny periods, after fog clears from south-western areas. Very warm inland in central and southern areas.

Tonight:

Cloudy with light rain or drizzle in the west of Scotland and Northern Isles. Other areas dry with clear periods, allowing some mist and fog patches to form in places.

Tuesday:

Some drizzle over far north and northwest, else dry and sunny for most areas after early mist, fog and patchy low cloud clears. Becoming hot inland over England and Wales.

Outlook for Wednesday to Friday:

Sunny for many on Wednesday but heavy showers starting to arrive from the southwest. Turning more widely unsettled on Thursday and Friday. Very warm or hot before temperatures gradually decline.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.